Stanford (5-4 straight up and against the spread) has alternated SU and ATS wins and losses the past five games after routing Washington State last weekend as a 30-point home favorite, 58-0.

-The Cardinal dominated the Cougars in first downs (22-14), rushing yards (344-73), turnovers forced (5-0) and time of possession (32:21-27:39). Running back Toby Gerhart led the charge with 22 carries for 132 yards and four touchdowns.

-Oregon (6-3 SU, 4-5 ATS) takes the field hoping to rebound from its loss to California last weekend as a 2 ½-point road underdog, 26-16. The combined 42 points went 'under' the 57 ½-point closing total.

-The Ducks led the Golden Bears in first down (21-16), rushing yards (206-132) and turnovers forced (5-3). Quarterback Jeremiah Masoli was 7-of-21 passing for 44 yards with two interceptions, while rushing 21 times for 97 yards and a score. Running back Jeremiah Johnson paced the ground game with 20 carries for 117 yards and a touchdown.

-Oregon is 4-0 SU and ATS the past four meetings with Stanford after cruising last season as an 18 ½-point closing total, 55-31. The combined 86 points soared 'over' the 60-point closing total.

-Stanford offensive lineman Chris Marinelli (shoulder) is 'probable' versus the Ducks, while running back Jeremy Stewart (undisclosed), linebacker Nick Macaluso (undisclosed), fullback Owen Mareic (ankle) and safety Austin Yancy (hamstring) are 'questionable.'

-Oregon quarterback Jeremiah Masoli (foot) and running back LeGarrette Blount (wrist) are 'probable' against the Cardinal.

-Saturday's forecast for Eugene, Oregon calls for rain, with a high of 54 degrees and a low of 46.

Arizona State at Washington

-Caesars Palace opened Arizona State as a 14 ½-point road favorite over Washington, with the total set at 53. Kickoff is scheduled for 7:00 p.m. ET.

-Arizona State (2-6 SU, 2-4 ATS) is currently mired in its longest SU losing streak (six games) since 1929. The Sun Devils haven't won a game since September 6 when they trounced Stanford to start the season 2-0. Arizona State showed some life last weekend before ultimately falling to Oregon State as a 15 ½-point road underdog, 27-25. The combined 52 points slithered 'over' the 51-point closing total.

-The Sun Devils trailed the Beavers in first downs (22-14), rushing yards (109-78), passing yards (261-217) and time of possession (32:31-27:29). Quarterback Rudy Carpenter was 15-of-27 passing for 217 yards with a touchdown, hooking up with wideout Kerry Taylor six times for 81 yards. Running back Shaun DeWitty accounted for 16 carries for 110 yards in the setback.

-Washington (0-8 SU, 1-7 ATS) was embarrassed by Southern Cal last weekend as a 45 ½-point road underdog, 56-0. There was no total on that matchup.

-The Huskies were on the wrong side of first downs (25-15), rushing yards (297-71), passing yards (188-113) and turnovers forced. Signal caller Ronnie Fouch completed 14-of-33 passes for 113 yards with three interceptions, while running back Brandon Johnson had 18 carries for 54 yards.

-The Sun Devils are 3-0 SU and ATS the previous three meetings with the Huskies after prevailing last year as an 11 ½-point home favorite, 44-20. The combined 64 points went 'over' the 54-point closing total.

-Arizona State wide receiver Kyle Williams (concussion) is 'probable' against the Huskies, while defensive end James Brooks (ankle) and running back Ryan Bass (hamstring) are 'questionable.'

-Washington linebacker Donald Butler (neck) and defensive tackle Cameron Elisara (neck) are 'probable' versus the Sun Devils, while cornerback Mesphin Forrester (knee) is 'doubtful.' Wide receiver Cody Brunns (concussion), defensive back Victor Aiyewa (groin) and running back David Freeman (ankle) are 'questionable.'

-Saturday's forecast for Seattle, Washington calls for a 70 percent chance of rain, with a high of 54 degrees and a low of 46.

College Football

Oregon State at UCLA

-Caesars Palace lists Oregon State as a 7 ½-point road 'chalk' over UCLA, with the total set at 50 ½. FOX Sports Net begins its coverage of this contest at 6:00 p.m. ET.

-Oregon State (5-3 SU and ATS) is riding a three-game SU winning streak after slipping past Arizona State last weekend as a 15 ½-point home favorite, 27-25. The 'over' has cashed the past two games for the Beavers.

-Quarterback Lyle Moevao was 4-of-6 passing for 43 yards with a touchdown before suffering a shoulder injury. Backup Sean Canfield stepped in to go 19-of-28 passing for 218 yards with two touchdowns and an interception. Freshman Jacquizz Rodgers paced the ground game with 30 carries for 133 yards.

-UCLA (3-5 SU, 5-3 ATS) has alternated SU wins and losses the past five games after falling to Cal two weeks ago as a 19 ½-point road underdog, 41-20. The combined 61 points eclipsed the 51-point closing total.

-The game was close until Cal posted 24 points in the fourth quarter, finishing the contest with disadvantages in first downs (18-11), rushing yards (232-16), turnovers forced (4-0) and time of possession (34:25-25:35). Quarterback Kevin Craft completed 17-of-35 passes for 206 yards with four interceptions, while wide receiver Taylor Embree caught five passes for 90 yards.

-The Bruins are 3-0 SU and ATS the previous three outings with Oregon State after prevailing last year as a 2 ½-point road underdog, 40-14. The combined 54 points slithered 'over' the 53-point closing total.

-Oregon State quarterback Sean Canfield is expected to start, while QB Lyle Moevao (shoulder) may be available against the Bruins. Cornerback Keenan Lewis (ankle) and center Alex Linnenkohl (ankle) are 'probable,' while tight end Gabe Miller (hamstring) is 'questionable.'

-UCLA defensive tackle Chase Moline (back) is 'probable' versus the Beavers, while wide receiver Nelson Rosario (ankle) is 'doubtful.' Defensive end Reginald Stokes (knee), offensive tackle Jeff Baca (hamstring), linebacker Kyle Bosworth (knee) and linebacker Joshua Edwards (foot) are 'questionable.'

-Saturday's forecast for Pasadena, California calls for sunny skies, with a high of 80 degrees and a low of 55.

Arizona at Washington State

-Caesars Palace opened Arizona as a 40 ½-point road favorite over Washington State, with no total posted.

-Arizona (5-3 SU, 6-2 ATS) is coming off its bye week after losing to Southern Cal Oct. 25 as a 15-point home underdog, 17-10. The combined 27 points never seriously threatened the 52 ½-point closing total, helping the 'under' improve to 3-1.

-The Wildcats mustered just 188 yards of total offense, and were on the short end of time of possession (33:34-26:26). Signal caller Willie Tuitama was 14-of-30 passing for 88 yards with an interception, while Nic Grigsby had 14 carries for 69 yards and a touchdown.

-Washington State (1-8 SU, 0-8 ATS) continued its downward spiral by getting routed by Stanford last weekend as a 30-point road underdog, 58-0. The Cougars have been outscored their last three games, 193-13.

-Quarterback Kevin Lopina completed 16-of-28 passes for 132 yards with two interceptions, while running back Logwone Mitz had 11 carries for 62 yards.

-The Wildcats are 2-1 SU and 3-0 ATS the last three meetings with the Cougars after winning last season as a three-point home favorite, 48-20. The combined 68 points went 'over' the 59 ½-point closing total.

-Arizona cornerback Devin Ross (groin) is 'probable' against the Cougars, while running back Keola Antolin (shoulder), offensive tackle Adam Grant (hand) and defensive end Ricky Elmore (leg) are 'questionable.'

-Washington State running back Chris Ivory (hamstring) is 'doubtful' versus the Wildcats, while linebacker Myron Beck (stinger), offensive guard B.J. Guerra (neck), defensive end Kevin Kooyman (stinger), cornerback Tyrone Justin (ankle) and tight end Devin Frischknecht (ankle) are 'questionable.'

-Saturday's forecast for Pullman, Washington calls for a 70 percent chance of rain, with a high of 51 degrees and a low of 41.

California at Southern Cal

-Caesars Palace installed Southern Cal as a 21 ½-point home favorite over California, with no total posted. ABC Sports will provide coverage of this matchup beginning at 8:00 p.m. ET.

-California (6-2 SU and ATS) has won back-to-back outings SU and ATS after running past Oregon last weekend as a 2 ½-point home 'chalk,' 26-16. The combined 42 points went 'under' the 57 ½-point closing total, ending consecutive 'over' outings.

-Signal caller Nate Longshore was 13-of-27 passing for 136 yards with a touchdown, while running back Jahvid Best had 16 carries for 93 yards.

-Southern Cal (7-1 SU, 5-2 ATS) continued its winning ways by routing Washington last weekend as a 45 ½-point closing total, 56-0. There was no total on that contest.

-USC is an incredible 24-0 in November under head coach Pete Carroll. The Trojans lead the country in total defense (211.6 yards per game), scoring defense (7.1 points per game) and opponent passer rating (82.3).

-USC jumped out to a 42-0 halftime advantage, and ran just three basic plays in the second half. Quarterback Mark Sanchez completed 15-of-19 passes for 167 yards with two touchdowns, while CJ Gable had 10 carries for 108 yards with two scores.

Herm Edwards may have the worst team in football this season. There is still plenty of unrest at quarterback and no threat on the outside. Couple that with their best defensive player Jared Allen going to the Vikings in the offseason and you have the makings of a 4 win team. UNDER!

Lions OVER 6.5

Lions quarterback Jon Kitna promised playoffs last year and after a 6-2 start the team fizzled down the stretch. This year their division is actually worse and the Lions finally have a running back in Central Florida rookie Kevin Smith. A 9 win season and the playoffs are a reality here. OVER!

Jets OVER 7

Brett Favre. Anything else? OVER!

Redskins UNDER 8

For starters the Redskins play in the toughest division in the NFL. Joe Gibbs is gone and new coach Jim Zorn has never been a head coach in this league. I still have major questions as to whether Jason Campbell is a starter in this league. Plus the wideouts are suspect and Jason Taylor is already banged up. UNDER!

Patriots UNDER 12.5

Too easy. Pats go 12-4 and you win. I still think the Pats are the best team in football but you would expect a lull after going 16-0 during last year's regular season. Priorities have shifted and Brady and company have their sights set on their 4th championship. UNDER!

Vikings OVER 8

Bad division here again. I know that Jackson may not be the answer at quarterback for Brad Childress but they do have the most dangerous back in football in Adrian Peterson. Plus I believe this may be the best defense in the conference. The Purple Eaters are good for 10 wins and the playoffs this year even with questions at quarterback. OVER!

-The Trojans are 3-1 SU and 4-0 ATS the past four games with Cal, with the 'under' prevailing each time. USC prevailed last year as a 4 ½-point road 'chalk,' 24-17, while the combined 41 points went 'under' the 51-point closing total.

-Cal quarterback Nate Longshore is expected to start against the Trojans, while QB Kevin Riley (concussion) and defensive lineman Cody Jones (ankle) are 'doubtful.' Defensive end Rulon Davis (leg) and offensive guard Noris Malele (ankle) are 'probable,' while kicker David Seawright (thigh), offensive guard Mike Tepper (pectoral) and offensive lineman Matt Laird (shoulder) are 'questionable.'

-USC running back Joe McKnight (toe) is 'probable' versus the Golden Bears, while defensive tackle Averell Spicer (ankle) and tight end Blake Ayles (knee) are 'doubtful.' Fullback Stanley Havili (illness) and linebacker Michael Morgan (foot) are 'questionable.'

-Saturday's forecast for Los Angeles, California calls for sunny skies, with a high of 78 degrees and a low of 56.

College Football Scores

Well sportsfans, We are now midway thru the regular season of the NFL. There has certainly been a fair share of surprises, both good and bad. At seasons start, I really thought that the Bill's were a threat in the AFC East. And when Tom Brady went down, it was theirs to take. In the last two weeks we saw them fall apart as they gave up the final 18 points in their 25-16 road loss to Miami and last week they ran for only 30 yards in a 26-17 home loss to the Jet's. Right now surprisingly, the Patriot's have the 10th best running team in the league. That division is still theirs. The New York Jet's are a good team but the erratic play of Brett Favre puts them in the rear down the road. The AFC South is a huge surprise. The only unbeaten team in the NFL is the Tennessee Titan's at 8-0. The second place Colt's are 4-4. This means that even if Tennessee splits their last four games, they still finish at 12-4. Indianapolis would have to run the gauntlet and win every remaining game and yet they would still finish at a tie at 12-4. This is truly unlikely. The Jag's and the Texan's are tpuh teams but this year , I just don't see them getting over that hump. The AFC North is clearly between the Steeler's and the Raven's. With a healthy Willie Parker and Santonio Holmes back in the lineup for Pitt, I give a big edge to the Steeler's. The West is a mess. Denver is in first at 6-4 but they are decimated by injuries, particularly on defense. They also have a tough remaining schedule. I believe that the Charger's will get their act together and gain some ground here. The NFC is home to some real odds-on favorite's to go to the big game. The East is headed by the Giant's who have the best all-arond team in the game. Unlike the Titan's who are undefeated, the Giant's suffered one loss. Sometimes you need a loss to show the players and staff where your weaknesses lie. Can you belive that the worst team in the east is the Cowboy's at 5-4? Any one of the four teams in the division can go through the playoff's. Don't count Dallas out just yet. But the Giant's are the real deal. The NFC South is up for grabs also. Only two games seperate the Panther's, Buc's, Falcon's, and Saint's. New Orleans is without Reggie Bush for a while and this will be fatal to them. I think the Falcon's have the best 1-2 punch in the league as far as quarterback and running back are concerned. Matt Ryan is playing like anything but a rookie. And Michael Turner has over 794 YR. The one thing that will hurt them is their lack of overall playoff experience. Tampa Bay is good but will fall apart down the road. The Panther's are the team to watch here. At 6-2 and in first place, as long as they stay healthy,the running game of Stewart and Williams will get over 100 yards rushing each game and Steve Smith will keep tacking on huge receiving days. The North is to me the most disappointing division in the league. Chicago is vulnerable, Detroit is horrible, and the Viking's despite having Adrian Peterson just can't close the deal. The cream in this division is the Packer's. They will win the North. As far as the West is concerned, you can take the Seahawk's, 49er's, and Ram's , combine their talent and still might not get alot of victories. The team to beat in this division is the Cardinal's. Kurt Warner is having the best year I can remember since his Super Bowl year with St. Louis. He has the best tandem of receiver's in the NFL in Boldin and Fitzgerald. I see the Giant's going to the big game against either Tennessee or the Steeler's. Well, there you have it. Make sure to check out all of my winning NFL and NBA selections. Thank you, Joe D'Amico

North Carolina is not out of the hunt just yet for the Coastal crown thanks to some scrappy play by its backup quarterback, Cam Sexton. The junior signal caller held his own against Boston College on Oct. 25, completing 19 of 30 passes for 238 yards and three touchdowns.

I expect Sexton to continue playing well here, but he'll still end up making a couple of poor throws that the Ramblin' Wreck will capitalize on.

Final Score: Georgia Tech 23, North Carolina 17

Kansas (-1 ½) at Nebraska – 2:30 pm

Bo Pelini is finding out just how hard it is to be a head coach at the FBS level. His Cornhuskers are much improved this season with 5-4 record, but they're just 2-3 in Big 12 play. Yet Nebraska can't seem to stop shooting itself in the foot with penalties. The 'Huskers are the 11th worst team in nation by averaging eight yellow flags per game for 68.7 YPG. And Pelini's club has given up 35 points to their opponents when committing a penalty while on defense.

Those dumb mistakes will be highlighted all the more against the Jayhawks. Kansas' gunslinger, Todd Reesing, is the No. 3 QB in the league with a 68.4 completion percentage. And he carved Nebraska's secondary up last year for 354 yards through the air and six passing touchdowns.

Final Score: Kansas 45, Nebraska 20

Wake Forest (-4 ½) versus Virginia – 3:30 pm

Duke's Thaddeus Lewis just might have salvaged the Demon Deacons' season as he was picked off twice last week in their 33-30 overtime win. In all honesty, Wake Forest was totally outplayed in this game by getting outgained 376-344 and allowing 21 first downs to the Blue Devils.

Virginia missed out on putting itself in the driver's seat of the ACC Coastal Division after falling 24-17 at Miami in overtime. What was strange about that game was the fact the Cavaliers' defense went soft in the fourth quarter and extra time.

I'm going with Wake Forest here as Riley Skinner should be able to pick apart a Cavalier defense that seems to have lost their identity.

Final Score: Wake Forest 22, Virginia 10

Penn State (-7 ½) at Iowa – 3:30 pm

Joe Paterno's club finally answered the questions of how tough they are after pulling out a gritty road win against Ohio State two week's ago. The Nittany Lions will have Daryll Clark back under center after suffering a mild concussion versus the Buckeyes. His ability to both run and through effectively will keep Iowa's defense on its heels.

The Hawkeyes will rely on running back Shonn Greene this week. He claims his ankle is better, but that won't matter against a defense that doesn't give up many yards on the ground. Also, Ricky Stanzi has proven that he can't handle a pass rush this year. So look for him to make some bad decisions with the ball in the pocket.

Final Score: Penn State 28, Iowa 13

Texas Tech (-3 ½) versus Oklahoma State – 8:00 pm

This is a tough matchup to handicap. Both schools proved it could handle playing against a big time opponent in tilts with the Longhorns. Plus, the Cowboys have covered the spread all season (8-0 ATS).

I see that changing this Saturday against a Texas Tech squad that proved just how explosive its defense could be by sacking Colt McCoy four times, while picking off one of his passes. And the Red Raiders should have no problems attacking Zac Robinson in a similar fashion. But they have to remember that Robinson threw for 211 yards and a pair of scores in last year's 49-45 victory for Oklahoma State.

Also, the home team is 9-1 SU and 7-3 ATS in the last 10 head-to-head meetings of these programs. Add that with the fact the Red Raiders are in revenge mode and you can see Mike Leach's club avoiding the letdown.

Final Score: Texas Tech 33, Oklahoma State 24
